BIOGRAPHY

As far back as Phil can remember there has been horses and boats in his life. His mother’s equestrian background - her training was at Lambourne racing stables and his father’s agricultural background. Phil happily recalls many a childhood holiday spent on a narrowboat touring Britain’s Inland Waterways.

After the sale of their saddlery and Land Rover business in 1985, Phil’s parents moved to Devon to run the horse-drawn barge on the Grand Western Canal.

Joining the family business in ‘87 Phil became captain of Tivertonian and like a “duck to water” took to the public speaking that was required prior to and during the trip. Phil enjoyed the lively banter and rapour that he quickly established with the passengers.

It was around this time that Phil was introduced to personal and professional development, later attending Cranfield University. Following this Phil took his speaking a step further, joining the Professional Speakers Association and meeting Carol Jones of Select Speakers, a speakers agency, and went on to speak around the country on leadership, motivation, communication and self confidence.

In 2005 Phil and his wife Jacquie became proud owners of the horse-drawn barge, changing the name to Tiverton Canal Co. Phil now spends his time supporting Jacquie with the operation of the business and travelling around the country sharing his passion and goal of keeping alive the last Horse-Drawn Barge in the Westcountry.

Whether suited or booted Phil has retained his light and humorous style with plenty of anecdotes.
