A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE GRAND WESTERN CANAL

In 1796 an Act of Parliament granted permission for this Canal to be built. It was to be part of a grand design to cut off the dangerous journey around Lands End by linking the Exeter Ship Canal with the Grand Western Canal and onto the Bridgwater & Taunton Canal.

In 1814 a section of the canal was completed from Tiverton to Westleigh. After many delays, in 1838 the canal was extended from Lowdells to Taunton; this section had 7 tub-boat lifts and an incline plane. By then plans to link to the Channel had been abandoned.

With the advent of the Bristol & Exeter Railway, much of the trade was taken from the Canal, and in 1865 the section from Lowdells to Taunton was sold to the railway company and abandoned. However, for a short time the Canal was profitable mostly carrying coal and limestone in horse-drawn tub boats to the kilns at Tiverton, this continued until the 1920's. The stone was fired in the kilns to make lime for farming and house building. There was also a thriving trade in harvesting the White Water Lilies and selling them at Convent Garden Market. The campaign to save the canal proved to be successful, in 1971 Devon County Council took ownership and declared it a Country Park. In 2006 achieving recognition as a Local Nature Reserve.
